Lesson 7

Creating an Email Feedback Form

- Feedback form allows communication with your web site's visitors.
- Visitors can submit questions and comments which will then be forwarded to your email address.

Example: <form action="mailto:juan@gmail.com" method="get" enctype="text/plain">

Elements of a Feedback Form

Attribute	Definition
action="mailto:emailaddress"	Sends the form results to your email address method="get"	Sends them as one request to the mail program.
enctype="text/plain"	Makes the results readable in your email box.

Adding a Submit Button

- A submit button is usually placed at the end of forms and when clicked, submits the information input. It can be made by keying in submit as the value of the type attribute of <input>.

  Example: <input type="submit">

Furthermore, the value of the value attribute indicates the label on the button.

Adding a Reset Button

- Reset or Clear button is usually placed at the end of a form. When it is clicked, it clears all the input information. This can be done by keying in reset as the value of the type attribute <input>.

  Example: <input type="reset">

Likewise, the value of the value attribute indicates the label on the button.

Adding a File

- File allows your website visitor to send files in your web server. File can be made by keying file as the value of the type attribute of <input> while the accept attribute specifies the types of files that the server accepts (that can be submitted through a file upload).

  Example: <input type="file" name="image" accept="file_extension">

Note: The accept attribute can only be used with <input type="file">

Optional Attribute for Accept

Value	Definition
file_extension	A file extension starting with the STOP character, ex. .gif, .jpg, .png, .doc audio/*	All sound files are accepted.
video/*	All video files are accepted.
image/*	All image files are accepted.
media_type	A valid media type, with no parameters.
